General Pillow's corn crop, it is estimated, will make 200,000 bushels.

Secretary Seward left for Auburn, New York, on the 24th.

A Conservative convention has been called in Alabama, to meet on the 3d of September.

Five thousand dollars is offered for the recovery of the body of General Meagher.

On Sunday last all the gold in the vaults of the Treasury was $117,000,000, of which amount $21,000,000 were gold certificates.

A Government train was attacked on the 13th instant by fifteen Indians at Laporte. A man named Bowkerson was killed.

The killing of Scruggs at Goodlettsville, Tennessee, a few days ago, was a personal affair altogether, having no reference to politics.

The Lord stolen bonds were, it appears, returned through Baring Brothers, who received them from the English lawyer, who, in turn, received them from the guilty party.

The Postmaster General appointed Isadore Bradley, of New Haven, special agent of the Postoffice Department, in charge of the mails between San Francisco, Japan and China. He goes per steamship Great Republic September 3.

The agent of the Freedman's Bureau in North Carolina makes a gloomy report. He says widows and orphans are counted by the thousand, and their efforts to obtain employment having generally been futile, they are on the point of starvation.

Bishop Hopkins, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Vermont, and presiding bishop of the United States, accompanied by his eldest son, the editor of the Church Journal, will sail in August from New York to attend a sitting of the Anglican Council in London in September.

Marion Kohlman, a youth of sixteen years old, employed in the wholesale house of Louis Stix & Co., Cincinnati, was sitting upon a hatch in the second floor of the store Monday afternoon, when a staple gave way and the platform dropped from under him, and he fell about forty feet to the floor of the sub-cellar. He struck upon his head and was instantly killed.

In view of the complicated condition of political affairs in Mexico, and the grand France-Austrian movement in the direction of Mexico, these two missions are the most important and difficult. Under the tenure of law the offices remain in abeyance, and the President has no authority to appoint Ministers to Austria or Mexico until the Senate shall again meet and confirm the nominations.

The insanity of the Empress Charlotte, says a Vienna letter, has become so confirmed and so violent that she cannot be left alone for a moment. She is constantly endeavoring to destroy herself. At rare intervals she has sane moments, in which she declares, "I do not want to live. I prefer death to such a life as this. Where is my husband? Shall I never see him again? No, no, he is dead, and yet I still live." Not a quarter of an hour passes but what the unhappy Princess demands news of her husband. Her bodily health has suffered sorely, and it is very doubtful if she will survive her husband long.

The adoption by the Austrian Reichsrath of measures for the political equality of religious faiths is one of the symptoms of an important though very quiet revolution which is going on in that country. Not only have Prussian tactics shattered Austrian armies, but Prussian ideas have broken up many of the old systems and oppressive laws of Austria. The Emperor, forced to admit that Austria as she has been was a melancholy failure, seems to have set himself earnestly to the work of reformation, to the development of a spirit of loyalty and nationality among his people, to a care of the finances, to the promotion of industry, and in some degree to the cultivation of genuine freedom of thought. In this direction now lies the only hope of Austria.

The Nashville Union, of the 23d, says: "Another of those bloody tragedies which we have so often of late been called upon to record, occurred at Clarksville last Saturday night. Nick Carney, during the war was a member of one of the partisan bands who won a terrible name in the annals of guerrilla warfare, was shot dead by a young man employed as a bar keeper in Jack Hale's restaurant. On a previous occasion, there had been a difficulty between the two, and Carney, while drunk, had drawn a brace of revolvers upon the bar keeper. At about eight o'clock Saturday night, Carney entered the restaurant intoxicated, and called for whisky, which the bar keeper refused. The drunken man at once drew a revolver, and as he did so, the young man, in self-defense, also drew one and fired. Carney fell, the ball passing through his right lung and inflicting a mortal wound. At last accounts he was lingering in great agony, and ere this has doubtless passed into eternity. As a citizen Carney was sociable and clever, and when free from the influence of liquor was quiet and peaceable."

The President is preparing a proclamation warning all persons in the United States from joining in any unlawful expeditions against Mexico.

A young man named Leo Brown, of Springfield, Illinois, was, last Saturday, bitten by a rattlesnake. He first killed the snake, drank a quart of whisky, and is doing well.

A great freshet is reported in the upper Mississippi. Much damage to property has been done; 35,000,000 butt of logs have been swept away from different booms, making a loss of $350,000.

The captured Confederate cannon at the Washington navy yard is being placed on board the steamer Nina, to be taken to Annapolis, where they are to be arranged in a public park. This is pursuant to an order from the Secretary of the Navy.

Late advices from Vera Cruz state that the body of Maximilian will be delivered to the Austrian legation. The remains are now on the way to Vera Cruz. There is no truth in the report that foreign Consuls had been molested in Mexico.

The Tribune says the nomination of Horace Greeley as Minister to Austria was a complete surprise to him, as well as the public. He is obliged for the compliment, but could not be induced to leave this country at present.

The Paris Monde tells a sad case of cholera. An elderly workingman who had never manifested the slightest literary ability and no taste for letters was violently attacked with cholera in 1865. It affected his mind, and since then he has been writing poetry. He has published a volume of poems, it is said, of considerable merit. That kind of cholera would help a few men that we know of.

GRAND CONSERVATIVE MASS MEETING.

Tipton County Rallying for Equal Rights.

Special Correspondence of the Avalanche.]

COVINGTON, July 22, 1867.

EDITORS AVALANCHE: To-day is a great day in Covington. For several weeks previously it has been reported in all sections of the country that our standard-bearer for Congress, the Honorable John W. Leftwich, and other Conservatives, would speak at Covington to-day, and in being also to called upon one of the first courts, an immense crowd commenced gathering, and from early morn until past noon, the people both white and black, came pouring into town from all sections of the country. As there had been no political speaking in this county heretofore since the war you may imagine the interest as well as the curiosity of the people was intense; it reminding them of the good old ante bellum times when political discussion was the watchword of liberty. There has not been such another crowd of people in Covington as is to-day since the war; and tell it not to the Radicals a majority of them colored voters with a certificate to vote in their pockets. What mesmeric influence caused them to leave their plow handles in the distant fields miles away to come to town to hear the Conservatives speak? It was a laudable desire to be properly informed and to learn how to cast their votes intelligently. Raised suddenly to the position of freemen and voters, is it not natural that they should wish to know how to fill their new position creditably?

At eleven o'clock the Baptist church, the largest in the town, and the place designated for the speaker, was crowded to overflowing, and a portion of the church, fully one-half, being specially allotted to the colored voters, who paid strict attention to every word that was said. Precisely ten minutes past eleven o'clock the Hon. John W. Leftwich commenced his address, which we tell you was the very thing for the occasion.

He showed up Brownlowism in all its most disgusting details; the encroachments of Radical power upon liberty, and what an intolerable despotism was attempted to be fastened and perpetuated upon the people of Tennessee. His arguments were unanswerable, and when he invited and heard the Doctor before in Memphis, we must say that to-day he even surpassed himself; inspired with the flattering reception which he met with—the large concourse of people, black and white, and colored, which greeted him everywhere, the largest he tells me that he has seen in his canvass, seemed to give him an energy and enthusiasm which had a very telling effect upon his audience. There is in Dr. Leftwich's manner and address an honesty and sincerity of purpose which convinces the people that he is in earnest; that there is none of the tricks of the demagogue in his character, which at once wins their confidence, as well as captivates their judgment. For near two hours he held that large audience spell bound, and such was the attention given that not one word was lost. He concluded with cries to "go on" from all parts of the house. After his speech Mr. Vaughan, the Conservative candidate for Senator in this district, made a very able, logical and appropriate speech, and was frequently cheered during his delivery. When he concluded, General Glenn, of your city, arose and made one of his peculiarly characteristic speeches. General Glenn's address was mainly directed to the colored voters, he claiming to be their candidate. He showed them that their true friends were their old masters—a fact of which, in this vicinity, they have long since been convinced. They listened to him with marked attention. Take it all in all, this is a grand day for the Conservative party in Tipton. Leftwich & Co. are doing much good, the fruits of which will be manifest on the day of election. Mr. Leftwich goes home with me to-night, and to-morrow speaks at Portersville, in the southern portion of this county. We will be there, and perchance you may hear from us again.

We saw to-day James Cockerill, the Register of this county, who tells me that he has issued some sixteen hundred colored voting certificates and some three hundred white voting certificates, and intends to issue until the day of election to all who may be entitled to them. The question occurs, how will the negroes in this county vote? We will simply state, as the result of our observation, that the great majority of them will vote as their employers wish them; how that is, you who know anything of the sentiment of Tipton county can readily conjecture.

VERY INTERESTING CORRESPONDENCE.

Messrs. Leftwich and Nunn at Danceyville, Friday, July 19.

EDITORS AVALANCHE: A large turn out of gentlemen assembled in the Methodist meeting house, at half past eleven o'clock, to hear the discussion between the candidates for Congress, upon the all absorbing issues of the day.

Dr. Leftwich lead off in one of his happiest efforts. His earnestness, seriousness, and mild and persuasive eloquence, and the intelligent and masterly manner in which he handled the important questions of State and national politics, convinced all that he had studied his forth for his theme, and carried conviction to the minds of his hearers, save Radical office holders and office seekers, of the righteousness of the cause he advocated. He spoke nearly two hours to a select and attentive audience. He showed the colored people who were their true friends—not Brownlow, who, before their freedom, had ruthlessly visified, and abused, and badgered the advocates of emancipation, and since, had expressed joy at the prospect of their extermination in the State; not his (Leftwich's) opponent, who had to be sued at law, by the freedmen that worked for him in 1865, before he would pay them, and who was in favor of taxing their cotton fifteen dollars a bale; not amongst the Radicals, who only wanted to use them as votes to put themselves in office and power; but their true friends were to be found amongst those who now gave them employment and paid them wages without putting them to the expense and delay of a lawsuit, and to whom they always go when they want money or credit, and who were in favor of taking off their cotton tax.

Dr. Leftwich pressed his opponent to the wall on the record he had made, or rather failed to make, whilst a member of the Legislature.

Mr. Nunn, in his reply, seemed to let completely down. He used the most wishy washy appeals for argument, if argument his speech could be said to contain. In reply to Leftwich's cotton tax, he said he was in favor of the tax, for before there was any tax, cotton was only worth eight to ten cents per pound; since the tax it is worth fifteen to twenty cents per pound. To the negroes he said, "and how much did you get for the cotton you raised before there was any tax on it? Not a dollar. Now you get all but the tax."

He had said the day before at Hart's, as a reason why he did not vote on the bill enfranchising the negroes, that he was at home attending to his duties in the Circuit Court. When Leftwich charged upon him that on the very day that that bill passed he had a case postponed in the Chancery Court on the ground that he was absent at Nashville, attending to his duties in the Legislature, Mr. Nunn said it was not true, and demanded his author, who was promptly given by Dr. Leftwich.

Thus a question of veracity was raised. The facts in the case are matters of record, and cannot be successfully contradicted by the assertions of Mr. Nunn. They are as follows: Mr. Nunn asserted that there was not a week's interval between the adjournment of the Circuit Court and the meeting of the Chancery Court, and as he was present during the Circuit Court (which he introduced a witness to prove) and which was never denied, the inference was that he did not have time to reach Nashville by the 25th of February, the day the bill in question passed.

On page 366 of Record Book of the Minutes of the Circuit Court of Haywood county, is to be found this entry, under date of Saturday, February 16, 1867: "Court adjourned till Court in course."

The Chancery Court docket shows that the Court met February 25, 1867, that being the fourth Monday and the ninth day after the adjournment of the Circuit Court.

In the public acts of Tennessee for 1866-7, chapter 36, page 33, under the law enfranchising the negroes, is this entry, "Passed February 25, 1867."

On that very day the Chancery Docket shows that Bond vs. Greenwalds, one of the cases in which Mr. Nunn was defendent's counsel, was called for trial, and his partner asked for a continuance on the ground that Mr. Nunn was first in the case, and he was absent at Nashville. Judge Harris passed the case for the present, and on the next day after hearing a strong argument from Mr. Bate for the complainants, pressing a trial, he delivered his opinion at length, that as Mr. Nunn was a member of the Legislature, his duty to be in Nashville was paramount to his duty to be in Brownsville, and therefore he continued the case.

For the truth of this statement see Judge John W. Harris, all the members of the bar present, and Mr. Nunn's right hand man, the Clerk of the Chancery Court.

Now who has told the truth, and who has swallowed the eel?

Mr. Nunn in this, as he is on the cotton tax and other questions of the day, is simply mistaken. He surely would not intentionally make an assertion not founded in truth, and then stick to it, for the purpose of "currying favor" with the negroes. There are some men who would do so, but certainly Mr. Nunn is not one of them. It is true he fell into bad company at Nashville. But Dr. Leftwich hopes yet that he will be redeemed, for, said Leftwich at Dancyville, "he is the most respectable man in his party in Tennessee, which is the tail end of the Radical party in the United States."

It is to be hoped that he may yet be plucked, as a brand from the burning, from the political damnation that awaits him and all who oppose free suffrage, which is the most sacred and inalienable right of freemen.

FRIDAY, : : : : : : : : : JULY 26, 1867

"IMPEACHMENT!" has been the cry of large and small, lean and fat, short and long, among the tatterdemalions who have been disgracing the halls of Congress. It has been held in terrorem, over the head, like the sword of DAMACLES, and flashed like an ensanguined banner, in the face of the shadowy representative of the once proud, if not dangerously empowered Executive Department of the General Government. The cry has been echoed by every mean, petty cur of the Radical press throughout the length and breadth of the land. Those, who, less than four years ago, were ready to hang, draw and quarter every one who questioned the infallibility of the late President, even in the exercise of powers admitted by himself to be beyond his prescribed and delegated authority under the Constitution, have been loudest in ascribing the most villainous derelictions and atrocious usurpations to the present Executive, when discharging the functions of his office, according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution. Upon the very heel of adjournment, the Congressional shysters were vociferous in their demands for "impeachment." Yet when the hour came, they postponed present action on the matter, folding up the so-called "evidence," and carefully locking it (CARLIN-like) from public scrutiny and contempt, prepared to repeat their hideous howls in the public ear, from this time until the 21st of November. This is strictly in accordance with Radical tactics, the harangurers of that party being never so well satisfied as when they have pledges to make that may not be redeemed, or abuse to hurl that cannot be confronted with positive evidence of its absurdity. BOUTWELL, one of the most blatant and unscrupulous of the Yankee sputterers, has conceived it to be his special prerogative to be "the big dog of the tan yard," in exhibiting his ferocious determination to push "impeachment" through, and visit upon ANDY JOHNSON, the chance-created Executive, the full weight of his implacable indignation. No sooner had the veto of the President been read, than he was on his feet, pouring forth his anathemas with the violence of a mountain torrent that has met with obstruction and been temporarily checked but bursts the barrier and rushes on its heedless course. When Mr. RANDALL defied and dared the attempt to impeach the President, the Knight of the Silver Spoons made the following cowardly admission:

I admit that the gentleman from Pennsylvania, (Mr. Randall) uttered one truth in his remarks, and that is, that we dare not do our duty here in that respect. With shame and confusion of face, I, for one, bow to the truth of that remark.

If anything were further needed to show that the barking and not biting proclivities of the curs of Congress are paramount, and they let "I dare not wait upon I would," the statement of Mr. STEVENS is conclusive, and demonstrates that there is a controlling power over these immaculate patriots more potent than partizan rancor or offended virtue. He said:

I agree precisely with my colleague across the way, that we cannot impeach the President. But I say to our friends on this side who are urging that matter, they are urging it in vain. The result of my motion the other day clearly declared that; and, without attempting to make a disclosure, I undertake to say there are unseen agencies at work which will prevent impeachment. I have taken some pains to understand the composition of the House and Senate, and I am quite certain there are enough persons in the House, first, to prevent the presentation of articles of impeachment; and, second, there are enough in the Senate, if articles of impeachment were voted, to prevent conviction. So I repeat that any attempt to impeach the President will be vain. It is impossible to pierce the panoply which surrounds the White House.

Recollect this was not "a disclosure," but only timely advice to restrain the impetuosity of those who were making themselves conspicuous without knowing on what dangerous ground they were treading, or how extremely ridiculous they might, in a very short time, appear. There is evidently concealed under the vagueness of these cowardly admissions, considerable apprehension that venality and corruption are not unknown on the floor of Congress, and that some of the pure patriots there might be bought up, so as to render an attempt at "impeachment" an exceedingly hazardous game. It was therefore adjourned over to be talked about till November, when it may or may not be brought up, as after consideration may determine.

CONGRESS does not receive the commendation of the universal Radical press. Not that the latter object to the wrongs inflicted on the country, in the acts of usurpation which will be as a stench in the nostrils of posterity, but that so little was accomplished in such a length of time. The Missouri Democrat, that goes as far as the farthest in commending every Radical usurpation, every step toward despotic empire, uses the following language:

Congress has been in session nearly three weeks, and less than half that time has been spent in the consideration of these bills. Beyond this meager performance it has wasted time and words in debates not always dignified nor decorous. A strong force, both in the Senate and in the House, has been engaged in solving the problem "How Not to Do it." In the Senate, they succeeded in enforcing the muzzle resolution so far as to shut out nearly all general business. In the House, they succeeded in keeping from the country the evidence taken by the Judiciary Committee upon impeachment, though at the last they succeeded only by the most discreditable filibustering.

When such reproof comes from a sycophantic journal, is it surprising that papers of high character and patriotic purpose should express the contempt and indignation inspired by Congress in much stronger and more emphatic terms? One of its own minions and echoes expresses dissatisfaction; not that the measures adopted were unconstitutional and despotic, but that the fillibustering Congress "shut out nearly all general business." The New York Times, a paper of far more ability and less rowdyism than the Democrat, pays its addresses to Congress after this fashion: "It is one of the marked traits of the present Congressional session that members discuss every subject under heaven except the one properly before them. Thus, in Friday's famous debate on the Reconstruction bill, that bill was entirely ignored, and, instead of it, Ireland, the Philadelphia religious riots, Tom MOORE's poetry, Sisters of Charity, sausages, scullions, Presidential candidates, JEFF. DAVIS and GREELEY, GRANT and WARD BEECHER, JUAREZ and J. B. CLARKE, and, as the auctioneers say, "other things too numerous to mention," were the topics of debate. The previous question came like an electric shock, and the strict party vote which followed showed that whatever had been said was not for the South or for the Union, but for "buncombe." That is treating "the Lord's annointed," if not with indifference, certainly contempt. They are at best scullions, and the description by the Times very graphically paints the farce of "High Life Below Stairs," which is so often acted now in the halls of the National Legislature. That something was done beside passing the Explanatory, Double Twisted Reconstruction act, we have only to point to this paragraph. The labors were indeed marvelous, considering the dog days: "Mr. STILLWELL, Congressman from Indiana, was nominated as Minister to Venezuela, but was laid over until next session without definite action. The nomination of General JOHN A. MCCLERNAND, of Illinois, as Minister to Mexico, and MARCUS ATTERBOURG, as Secretary of Legation to the same, were both rejected. Colonel LOOMIS, of Michigan, formerly of LOOMIS' Battery, was nominated as Minister to Hayti, and was laid over. WARD H. LAMON, formerly Mr. LINCOLN's law partner, was rejected as Consul General to Havana. J. J. SANTMEYER (poor SANTY) was rejected as Assessor of the First District of Cincinnati."

In the House, on Wednesday, Mr. Brooks presented the affidavit of Willis Hockaday, (colored,) denying every important allegation in a former affidavit of his presented on the part of Mr. McKee, contesting the seat of Mr. Young from the Ninth Congressional District of Kentucky, denying that he had ever made such statements to Mr. McKee, who drew up the first affidavit, and stating that that affidavit had never been read to him at the time he was sworn to it.

One of our exchanges thinks that "comment is unnecessary." Such is not our way of thinking. Such glaring attempts at rascality should be exposed in the most withering language, and such fellows as SAM. MCKEE be held up to execration, as assassins of their country's peace, the would-be robbers of personal rights, and the vile thieves who would filch and steal every vestige of liberty and put it in their pockets. When such creatures as LUCIEN ANDERSON and BOLINGER, who were the infamous associates of PAINE, in maltreating and robbing the people of the First District of Kentucky during the war, and are now battening on their ill-gotten plunder, are relied upon for correct statements as to the loyalty of that district, how can there remain a hope that patriotic feeling will prevail over rascally faction, or that the constitutional rights of a State, never out of the Union, since first admitted, will be respected? The probation of Kentucky has been continued until November—will she be permitted then to take her place in Congress, or undergo the penalties of reconstruction? Even in her case, the cobblers and botches that excluded her and claimed that it was not in hostility to any individual members elect, stultified themselves, if such a thing were practicable, in the admission of Mr. ADAMS, one of her representatives. If any such rule could be applied to Kentucky, where is it to stop? May not fingers be burned in extending its application? A greater outrage could not well be committed, and it may be considered a fair illustration of the recklessness and atrocious disregard of all constitutional precedent, which govern Congress?

General THOMAS C. HINDMAN, of Arkansas, arrived in the city yesterday, on his way to Marshall county, Mississippi.

A South Carolina negro was struck by a locomotive and thrown fifteen feet into the air, falling back on the boiler. When the train was stopped, he merely complained that the boiler was uncommonly hot, descended and walked off.

A dreadful riot is reported to have occurred at Rogersville, East Tennessee, on Tuesday. A large crowd assembled to hear Mr. Etheridge speak, many of them, both Conservatives and Radicals, being armed with guns and pistols. After Etheridge had spoken an hour he was interrupted by a leading Radical, named Tom King, who announced a statement he made to be a d——d lie. Etheridge retorted bitterly, when some one shot at him. Numerous other shots followed in quick succession and the crowd broke, the Conservatives in one direction and Radicals the other, shooting as they ran. Finally halting, they fired volley after volley for about twenty minutes. A white Conservative and a colored man were killed, seven mortally wounded, and about thirty slightly. The wounded were conveyed to a hotel, where they remain. Etheridge was not hurt. After quiet had been restored he left for Sneedville.

It is also reported that a negro was killed at Knoxville yesterday for shouting for Brownlow and otherwise disturbing a Conservative meeting. The prompt action of the police prevented a riot.

JOHN CANNAVAN, with a view to let the public know if that he once had credit, having published, in yesterday's AVALANCHE, a false notification in regard to some notes, which I have the misfortune to hold against him, I will say that the said CANNAVAN never executed any notes to me a second time, and that I never asked him to do so; and his statement that I induced him to sign notes a second time, is a malicious falsehood.

I hold his notes for ten thousand dollars, ($10,000,) which he gave me for a good and valuable consideration, as can be seen by inspecting the books of the Register of Shelby county, book, pages 7, 72, & 474.

Mr. CANNAVAN is too well known in this community to fear that any body would be by him, does so any price.

We design establishing a Cotton Compress in connection with our warehouse, upon an adjacent lot, which will be ready by the 1st of October or so-ner. The proximity of our establishment to the river renders the handling or cotton so much less that we can guarantee compress shipments by river free of charge. The advantage of the position is equal to a saving of one dollar on all cotton sent for compressment from other warehouses, while on all cotton in our warehouse for compressment there can be two drayages saved, since it would be as easy for us to 1 sender it from our shed to the Compress as to turn it over in the ordinary way by transfer to drays.

From the allegations that there are grave doubts of the eligibility of Dr. White to act as County Commissioner, while his home and the residence of his family remain, as Hepburn's did, in Iowa, it is reported that injunctions may be served out to restrain and President of the County Commissioners from signing any warrants passed by the concurrence of Dr. White. Three Commissioners often do business of a very important character, and if Dr. White is not eligible many proceedings may be illegal. Perhaps the injunction may be instigated to get Dr. White out of the Board.

A blunder of the types yesterday made "meetings" for "mulligy." The question was, "Did'nt Ryder, the Radical candidate for the Legislature, try to get up a mutiny in Hal. Rogers' company of rebel soldiers, afterward company I of Colonel Douglas' rebel regiment, to which he (Ryder) at the time belonged, and was not his (Ryder's) object in trying to get up that mutiny to have himself chosen Captain of the rebel regiment in place of Hal. Rogers?"

COUNTY LOANS EXPOSED.

Dr. White's Efforts Producing Startling Disclosures.

The majority of the County Commissioners, after again and again rejecting the motions of Dr. White for a thorough expose of the financial condition of county affairs, was compelled by public opinion to have an investigation. The first fruit of the investigation thus ordered was a report yesterday, which shows that, in addition to what was heretofore known, there are outstanding warrants against the county for the enormous sum of $50,484 43. Of this the largest aggregate of warrants issued by Judge Leonard was $8,002 70 for the burial of paupers, and the largest aggregate of warrants issued by the County Commissioners was $8,012 85, for court expenses. Of the outstanding warrants $34,564 87 were issued by the County Commissioners.

The report shows that the County Trustee has kept his accounts with the strictest accuracy, and that he has received $399,975 79, and paid out $387,-462 63.

Dr. White yesterday brought in resolutions for a more thorough financial statement, but Mr. Hack was absent, and not another Commissioner would second the resolutions. The majority didn't want these exposures. What Dr. White wanted was that the Finance Committee should be required to furnish for this Board of Commissioners, and the use of the taxpayers and people at large of Shelby county, by the fifth day of August next, a full statement of the financial condition of the county, including the amount due upon all outstanding warrants; its bonded debt, and for what purpose and when bonds were issued; the amount of interest due upon the same, and when due, and what provision has been made to meet it; the amount of special jail debt, and what amount has heretofore been paid upon the same, and what provision has been made to meet it as it falls due, and all other indebtedness of every character for which the county is legally liable, and what provision has been made for liquidating said debts; the amount of taxable property, real and personal, in this this county, as exhibited by the present assessment rates; the per centage levied upon the same for State, county, jail, school, bridges and all other purposes, with the probable prospects of satisfying and paying of the above, and all other continually accruing indebtedness during the present fiscal year. Also the amount of all old claims which have been settled and warrants issued for by this Board, with the average length of time said claims had been due. Also the probable amount of funds the treasury will receive by the first of January next, from privileges and licenses granted, and fines collected, etc., with such other information as may be of benefit to the Board and satisfactory to the people of Shelby county.

NO EPIDEMIC IN MEMPHIS.

The Meeting of the Board of Health.

There was a lively, interesting meeting of the Board of Health yesterday afternoon. All the members were present.

A committee composed of Drs. Rogers and Irwin was appointed to confer with Superintendent Beaumont and advise him of the suggestions of the Board of Health. It is the desire of the members of the Board that the most entire harmony shall exist between their organization, which is mainly advisory in its character, and the Police Department, which is intended to execute the ordinances and take measures for promoting the health of the city.

A committee, composed of one doctor for each ward, or in other words the whole Board of Health, was appointed to have cognizance of nuisances and other abatement.

A committee, composed of Drs. Grant, Knode, Brown and Irwin, was appointed to prepare bylaws for the government of the Board of Health in its transaction of business.

A committee composed of Dr. Frazer, Brown and Sims was appointed to confer with druggists relative to the purchase of medicines for administration to paupers, the establishment of dispensaries, and other matters. This committee has also the further duty of conferring with the Mayor and Board of Aldermen, when the objects of the Board of Health seem to require the support of the City Fathers.

Having transacted the business incident to getting the machinery of the Board of Health into working order, a very excited discussion ensued in reference to a resolution declaring that there is not now, and has not been this year, any epidemic in Memphis. Dr. Taylor, in his extensive practice had seen many cases of disease, and was disposed to think there had been epidemic disease here. Dr. Knode was of the same opinion from the cases he had met with. Dr. Sims held similar views. The other members of the Board did not doubt there had been numerous and fatal cases of disease, but nothing of an epidemic character. This was declared by resolution to be the opinion of the Board of Health. It is to be hoped that it will put an end to the absurd stories in circulation elsewhere relative to the terrible prevalence of cholera here. We have had a good many fatal cases of congestive chills. Some good doctors say that there have been cases of cholera. Even if this is admitted, it should occasion no general alarm.

Sextons are required to report weekly the number of burials by them. The Board of Health adjourned to meet again at Dr. Knode's office at eleven o'clock on Saturday.

HOW THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS LAVISH MONEY.

Extracts from the Official Record of their Doings.

Ordered, by the Board of Commissioners of Shelby county, that a Janitor be appointed for the various Court rooms and public offices of said county, whose services shall commence on the 1st of September, 1867, whose duty it shall be to have charge of said Court rooms, together with all the furniture belonging to the county, wherever it may be, and whose first service on entering upon the duties of his office shall be to take an exact and careful inventory of said furniture, and mark it with the name of the county; said inventory shall be reported to this Board at its first sitting in the October term. Said Janitor shall be responsible for the keeping of the various Court rooms and the county furniture. He shall attend to the supply of the fuel and lights that may be required, and do all work, or cause it to be done, that may be necessary to keep the court rooms, jury rooms, halls and grounds, water closets, etc., in complete order, well cleaned, swept and dusted, properly heated and ventilated, and the fixtures and furniture in good repair. He shall make report quarterly, or oftener, to the Board of all repairs that may be needed in any of the public rooms or offices, and also of what additional furniture shall be required. Shall likewise, besides giving an inventory every quarter of all property in all the public rooms and offices and the condition of the same, report how all public rooms are occupied, and in what condition the are kept, and shall have the right to accompany the board daily, that he may be fully informed. He shall also perform any other duties in connection with said rooms, etc., that may be at any time required by this Board. For performing all of said duties he shall be allowed the sum of two hundred dollars per month, but shall be liable to removal at any time, by order of this Board.

A vote being taken, resulted in a unanimous vote for the order; but, on suggestion of Dr. White, upon whom a second vote was taken, a motion was irregularly made to change the name of Janitor to Superintendent, which resulted in the following vote: Ayes—White, Hack and Chairman Lenle; Nays—Merriman.

To change the name of the officer from Janitor to Superintendent resulted as follows: For Janitor—Commissioner Merriman; for Superintendent—Commissioners White, Hack and President Lenle.

Colonel James Bumars was elected to the position of Superintendent.

MASS MEETING IN THE EIGHTH WARD.

Hearty Support of Etheridge.

The Eighth ward Conservatives held a mass meeting near Poplar street market last night. A bonfire and a fine band attracted attention. Alderman W. H. Passmore was chosen Chairman, and Mr. Berger Secretary. There was a very large crowd, and a good deal of enthusiasm was manifested. John Bullock, Esq., made a brilliant and very able speech, to counsel peace and order on election day, and to urge that Brownlow and his party were not the men to control the destinies of the State for harmony, peace, the restoration of kindly feelings and material prosperity.

Colonel Nabors followed in a fine speech, to contrast the great leaders of the Radical and Conservative parties. He sketched the issues that divide them, and counselled peace and harmony on election day.

The sentiments of Mr. Bullock and Colonel Nabors were frequently applauded. In every sense this Eighth Ward meeting was a great success.

ITEMITAS.

City scrip was selling yesterday at from fifty-eight to sixty cents on the dollar.

It is said that Barbour Lewis owns F. W. Louis in fee simple, and that Dr. White has a mortgage on Mr. Hack.

Two indictments against different Radical officials have been threatened by parties aggrieved, but somehow these have been flashes in the pan.

The gravel that is taken from our streets that are being prepared for the Nicolson pavement is carted to the bluff, there screened, and then used again. The city allows the contractors to do this.

A gentleman who has travelled extensively in Mississippi says that many planters are exceedingly anxious for the completion of the Pacific railroad, as they believe that they will then get an abundant supply of Chinese laborers at moderate wages.

From thirty to sixty days ago the Government gave drafts for over a hundred thousand dollars worth of bounty claims, payable in this city. Somebody's delay or desire to use the money has kept back the payment, but now it is announced that a large amount is to be paid to claimants during the next ten days.

"OLD FOLKS AT HOME."

A Grand Gala Day in the Country.

"Free Blow" and General Good Cheer.

A Most Eloquent Address Delivered.

Roger de Coverly Revived.

Yesterday was as bright and buoyant as a day can be made. Although the sun was by no means languishing, a balmy air floated among the leaves, and as Willis might have said, twined its fingers among the tresses of girls and young matrons whose fresh cheeks it visited. We were not fortunate in being early on the ground, but arrived about noon. Colonel McLean, the President of the grand association of "Old Folks," had charmed them with a most interesting address, ex tempore, fraught with anecdote, and touching in its memories of the past.

The train at noon brought large accessions to the station. There were several hundred ladies, old, middle aged and fresh, young and blooming, and not a few of the rising generation, still in their nurses' arms. In point of appearance, character, and number, the assemblage has not been equalled in Shelby county. The "young folks" availed themselves of a fine band of music, and a prepared arbor to join in the merry dance, which ceased only when it was announced that the orator of the day, Colonel J. H. McMahon, had arrived. He was escorted to the arbor by a hundred of very young ladies, tastefully attired, preceded by the band. Upon the stand the following white haired veterans were arranged: F. M. Titus, J. M. Patrick, — — McManus, Samuel Semple, M. C. Cayce, T. C. Blakeley, Judge Dunlap, Parson Davidson, Edward Harrison, and the President, Colonel Charles McLean, presenting a venerable array seldom witnessed. General Albert Pike was invited to a seat on the "stand," but preferred remaining among us commoners. The reporters present return their acknowledgements to Colonel McLean for his courteous invitation to avail themselves of the most eligible conveniences afforded. The attention of the assemblage was claimed by President McLean, who introduced the orator of the day, Colonel John H. McMahon, who at once proceeded to deliver the following chaste, feeling and eloquent address. When he mentioned the members of the association who had "passed away," the scars imprinted on his own heart, and fresher wounds, still bleeding, almost denied him utterance. There were hearts, too, in that crowd, filled with sympathy, that vibrated to every emotion:

Old Folks and Young Folks.

"Time rolls his ceaseless course. The race of yore
Who danced our infancy upon their knee,
And told of wonders we, in our grandsires' store,
Of their strange ventures happ'ed by land and sea,
How they are laid from the things that be!
How few, all weak and withered, of their force,
Wait on the verge of dark eternity,
Like stranded wrecks, the tide returning hoarse
To sweep them from our sight! Time rolls his ceaseless course.'

Ay, and though his pathway be thickly strewn crushed and ruined hopes, and his footprints be with marked with the blood-stains of fond hearts from out which have been trodden, as in the wine press, the ruby juices of life, there are stages in his career when it is work of devastation should seem to be suspended—when the wails of sorrow would seem to be suppressed, and the voice of gladness substituted for the sob of grief—when chaplets of roses encircle his brow, and the moments as they pass sparkle as the dust of diamonds in the sunlight of Hope. Such a stage in Time's remorseless career is the occasion which has brought together the "Old Folks at Home" of the good county of Shelby, with their fair wives and blooming daughters—their stalwart sons, vigorous in the first flush and glory of manhood, and their sweet little grandchildren, with their bright eyes opening wonderingly into the marvellous Future, and seeing there only scenes like this, of unalloyed happiness.

It is a goodly custom, and a salutary, that which has been instituted amongst us, of meeting once a year, out in the free air, beneath the genial heavens, to meet and greet each other, to exchange salutations and good wishes, to cement still closer the friendships which have withstood the jars and shocks of twenty years, and to mould as it were into one family, those who are to take our places when we, too, shall have crossed over the River to repose in the shade of the trees which margin the shores of the better life in the great Hereafter. It is a custom which hath such vitality in it, that it survives the dislocations of a fearful Civil War so tremendous in its power of devastation as to have well nigh destroyed all else of the beautiful and happy past of our land. Its foundations are built upon the best and noblest characteristics of our nature; and, after all the imperfections of man—his passions and his prejudices—his rivalries and his jealousies—there dwells deep down in the human heart one aspiration implanted there by the Good Father of all—one of those Eden traces he still inherits, though the trail of the serpent is over them all—the aspiration for peace and good fellowship, and the enjoyment of the love and good will of his fellowmen. To the good and the true, wars, strifes, contentions, are but fever stages of existence—racked with pain, wild with fury, possessing no joys but the unsubstantial ecstasies of delirium. What is called glory, triumph, conquest, is often shorn of the gratification they bring by the feeling of self-abasement or of self reproach on account of the mad anger and injustice through which they were sought, when we come to contemplate them in the sweet calm of convalescence from this malady of the passions. It is then we feel and realize how far better it is to love than hate our fellowmen—how much more glorious it is to bear with, forgive and cherish, than to hotly resent, avenge and destroy—how much more truly glorious it is to conquer and restrain our passions than harshly to subdue our fellows to our resentful and arbitrary will.

When, therefore, those who have endured together the trials of life for twenty years or more—have experienced with each other their frailty and imperfection, as well as the good of that is, after all, really in man—come together some years ago and found "how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," an institution was born which will not, must not be let die. Its vitality was sorely tried, almost at the hour of its birth. In the very infancy of its organization, one of those raging fevers of the mind from which a nation is no more exempt than the individuals who compose it, plunged our heaven-favored land into the horrors of a war which history will record as the fratricidal strife of a race of giants. The properities of the occasion, and personal inclination alike forbid any further reference to this dreary and sad episode in our country's progress, than to say that when the hurricane passed, out of the wrecks and ruins every where visible, first to emerge, in all its pristine comeliness, without a scar or blemish, is the institution of the "Old Folks at Home"—yes, verily, at home, out among these grand old trees, and the other beautiful things of kindly nature, with the blue heavens above us inviting us to lift ourselves above the sordid and grovelling animosities of earth, and the free, fresh, health-giving winds cooling the fevered brow, and laving the overburthened heart to empty itself of its cares and anxieties. At home indeed—out on the woods of the country, and away from our dwellings in the dusty and sweltering city, as the early settlers were before so-called civilization, with its attendant devastations, had encroached down upon the trees of an artificial, commercial existence the stately temples nature provides for her worshippers. There be amongst you many who can remember well when upon the bluff upon which the sun now glares down upon exhausted fields whose fertility has been sacrificed to the demon greed of quickly gained wealth, was garnished with stately forests, filled with wild game, and carpeted with nutritious grasses, in prodigal abundance for the sustenance of man and beast. Even there the ax had let in the light upon the dwelling of the emigrant, who, loving Freedom and Nature and Truth better than the gilded pomp and revolting cares and follies of that artificial existence in which we fret away life in the hot bed centers of civilization, was content to raise up his children in the honest, manly ways of the primitive, independent American citizen. They were a race and type of men and women we no feared and loved God, and taught their children to speak the truth—to be true men and good wives. Were it not that it would pain the modesty which ever characterizes true excellence, I would address abundant illustrations out of this audience, of the efficacy of their precepts and example—connecting links, as they are, between the refinements and cultivation and luxury of the era in which we live, and the robust simplicity, energy and integrity of the pioneers who subdued the wilderness, and builded up the growing city to which many of us are condemned to return when this happy day shall be spent and over. Those were the "good old days," whose memory can dry up in the hearts of those who saw even the latest of them, only with the drying up of the fountain of life itself.

Your historian of last year, in the admirable and eloquent address which has become a most valuable part of your archives, has perpetuated the names of those grand old pioneer fathers of the county, rendering justice to their characters, and consecrating their memories in words of eloquent tribute to their worth. Upon me devolves the sadder duty of recording the names of those who have gone from among us since our last meeting. These are:

Nathaniel Anderson, President, died March 8th, 1867; came to Memphis in 1822.

W. D. Ferguson, Vice President, died 1866; came to Memphis in 1819.

Thomas B. Crenshaw, died August, 1866; came to Memphis in 1836.

Wm. H. Smith, died June 12th, 1867; came to Memphis in 1837.

Samuel T. Morgan, died July 3d, 1867; came to Memphis in 1844.

John Wildberger, died July 12th, 1867; came to Memphis in 1838.

Wm. K. Poston, died July 7th, 1866; came to Memphis in 1839.

W. C. Bryan, died in 1866; came to Memphis in 1842.

Wm. M. Folwell, died March 16th, 1867; came to Memphis in 1843.

James E. Felts, died July, 1866; came to Memphis in 1836.

Daniel Bogart, died January 22, 1867; came to Memphis in 1842.

What a host of recollections do these names recall in an assemblage like this, in which they were so well known, beloved and revered. Chief among them in the veneration which attaches to their names, alike for their years and their virtues were Nathaniel Anderson, the first President of this association; William D. Ferguson, Vice President, and Thomas B. Crenshaw. What citizen, or child of Memphis, or Shelby county, did not know and love Nat Anderson? One of the fathers of the city and commerce of Memphis—an active participant in and promoter of every good work of progress and improvement, whether commercial and financial or moral and social, he was known and loved for a generation with Majors Rhea and Hampton. "Those were the good old days," when many of us were younger than we are now—for, odd as it may seem to these handsome young gentlemen whose hearts are being ripened into good impulses under the influence of beauty and loveliness which the "Old Folks" have contributed in this occasion by bringing hither their daughters and grand-daughters, we and our contemporaries were young then—in those good old days his home was the center of a most genial hospitality, where every young man of worth and merit was made to feel himself at home. There are many of us who are now staid fathers, and quiet mothers, that remember with grateful pleasure his kindly sympathy with the young, and the good moral influences exerted in his family circle, in the times when are "went a-courting some twenty years ago." His memory is indelibly fixed in the minds of those "Old Folks" who were young folks twenty and twenty-five years ago. Quick in his temperament to resent injury, he was equally quick in his justice and magnanimity when convinced he was in error. An occurrence betwixt him and the late Major Marcus B. Winchester, cowpunchers and friends in their settlement in Memphis, will illustrate this trait of his character. I forget the exact occasion, but in the adjustment of some perplexing business, Major Anderson became irritated to an unusual degree, and in his frank, manly, impetuous way, blurted out his indignation at what he supposed at the moment was Major Winchester's indisposition to deal fairly—"Major Winchester, if you think on that, you are a rascal, sir." Winchester rose to his feet, with that courtly dignity for which he was so distinguished, and with perfectly unruffled temper, bowing as only Winchester could have bowed, responded: "I am very sorry, Anderson, that you could possibly think so." Touched at once by a sense of his injustice, he grasped his friend by the hand, and exclaimed: "Stop, Winchester, d—d if I do think so—I was wrong," and the old friendship went on undiminished. Peace to his ashes! He died as he had lived, a good, useful citizen, a patriot and a true hearted gentleman.

Colonel William D. Ferguson, Vice President of the "Old Folks'" organization, was a somewhat different, but not less excellent type of the "old folks" of an earlier time. One who knew him well, and who is to be his himself long enjoyed as first of jurists and poets, as well as soldier, is now adding that of statesman journalist, on the occasion of our old friend's departure paid this journal the following tribute:

[From the Memphis Appeal, June 5, 1867.]

A GOOD AND TRUE MAN GONE.—After a long and wasting illness, borne with a beautiful equanimity and patience by one utterly conscious of his doom, Wm. D. Ferguson, at Little Rock, in his sick room, our old friend, true and loyal, always through good and evil report, "passed over the river," to his rest, and "is now gone to abide the storm."

We first met Wm. D. Ferguson, at Little Rock, in October, 1838. He was then a little over thirty-three years of age, and we were but a few months the 20s of August, 1867. We knew him well, from that time until his death on Monday last, as a useful, honest, worthy man, thoughtful, of strong mind and great practical sense, a patriotic citizen, deep in intellect and in public affairs, eager to serve his country, but not ambitious of office, and one we never thought of as a public man, that he did not some stock in the public morality.

Mr. Ferguson was in 1838 a member of the Council, or upper body, of the Territorial Legislature of Arkansas, representing Crittenden county. After the Territory had become a State he retained the confidence of his constituents, and again and again represented them in the Senate, usefully connected with public affairs, rendering always valuable service. Not liberally educated, but originally a land surveyor, he was a good type of the frank and ardent frontiersman of those early days in Arkansas, and he had, as he was well entitled to have, the respect of all with whom he associated in those public services.

There are few left now, of those who were men of any mark in Arkansas when Mr. Ferguson was first elected to the Council of the day, Colonel John H. McMahon, who at once proceeded to deliver the following chaste, feeling and eloquent address. When he mentioned the members of the association who had "passed away," the scars imprinted on his own heart, and fresher wounds, still bleeding, almost denied him utterance. There were hearts, too, in that crowd, filled with sympathy, that vibrated to every emotion:

Charles Kean is prohibited by his physicians from appearing on the stage for six months at least.

At Cypress, Texas, on the 15th, John Woodill, lumber merchant, shot and killed a man named Griffin.

The late Dr. Lamballe, of Paris, went to Paris a poor boy, and left 560,000 francs ($112,000) to each of his five heirs.

Lieutenant Colonel Owen T. Turney, instead of being mustered out of service, has been transferred to the regular army.

General Ord has gone from New Orleans to Vicksburg, at which latter place his permanent headquarters are to be established.

A negro named Eli Smith jumped twelve feet, the other day, at Niles, Michigan. The Sentinel thinks that a feat equal to some of the bounty jumping once so frequent, but that Eli wouldn't do at all for a baby jumper.

Dan Rice, the other evening, in his circus, said he was not going to defile the fair record of thirty-seven years as a respectable showman by becoming a member of Congress.

The death of Henry Fleishman, an old and respected citizen of Houston, Texas, is announced as having occurred on the 16th instant.

Mme. Burke, of Biloxi, received a severe contusion on the evening of the 18th, by her hand coming in contact with the shaft of the steamer Creole, which she was leaving in haste after bidding adieu to a number of friends.

Olive Logan is writing a weekly feuilleton, full of wit and spirit, on theatricals in New York, for the lively Brooklyn Press. Olive is sister of Eliza Logan Wood, and, although not gifted with high histrionic art, possesses very considerable genius, which shows well in conversation and the occasional apparently unstudied efforts of her pen.

The following pen portrait is given of Judge Fisher, who presides at the Surratt trial, and whose rulings have so repeatedly created surprise among intelligent members of the bar: "Naturally mean in mind, narrow in prejudices, with very limited attainments in his profession, he is just the sort of character to be used by his intelectual superiors. Stanton and Holt could not have a more suple tool, to use as a means to justify their judicial murder of Mrs. Surratt.

Preston King and Mrs. Surratt.

The Evening Telegraph of Monday appeared very indignant and very much shocked in consequence of the statement in some paper to the effect that ex-Senator Preston King, of New York, drowned himself because of remorse for his having persistently refused to admit Miss Surratt to see the President while her mother was under sentence of death. This is no new story; neither is it without foundation, and pretty strong foundation. It is well known that Preston King was "on guard" at the White house at that time. Who placed him there, or why he was placed there, we know not; but he was there, and turned a deaf ear to all Miss Surratt's most earnest and eloquent pleadings to be permitted to see the President in behalf of her convicted mother.

The mother was executed—murdered. Not even the recommendation to mercy, signed by a majority of even the military officers who condemned her on purchased testimony, was allowed to reach the eyes of the President. The White House was hermetically sealed against any and all of her friends, even her weeping daughter, and Preston King was the instrument by which it was thus sealed. Not long after Mr. King drowned himself. Why? He had no other great cause of grief; nothing to make him desire to leave this world. He was in good health, he was wealthy, he occupied an honorable position in society, held a lucrative and an honorable office, (the collectorship of New York,) and was blessed with everything calculated to make life desirable. Why, then, did he commit suicide? Was it not the ghost of the murdered Mrs. Surratt, and the grief stricken form of her daughter, that drove him to the desperate deed?

He perhaps was responsible, too, for keeping the President ignorant of the recommendation of Mrs. Surratt to Executive clemency, as he was of preventing Miss Surratt from pleading with the President for her mother's life. He had served as a wretched tool in the hands of Stanton and Holt, to consummate the murder of an innocent woman, and the consciousness of all this proved too much for a man naturally as kind hearted as was Preston King. Under the curse of this damning consciousness life became insupportable, and he put an end to his wretched earthly existence. Such is the belief of many who are familiar with the facts above stated, and who well knew Mr. King, and no affected indignation of the Telegraph can change their belief. Philadelphia Daily News.
